Toronto Invasion Imminent

by LLOYD GEORGE
Senior Staff Writer

Why is a mouse when it spins?

What is the difference between a duck?

These and other mystifying philosophical questions will be answered to all those who make the aesthetically stimulating sojourn to that wonder of wonders, Toronto, commonly known as Hogtown.

A football game will also be viewed.

More Fun

The special train, similar to that which made the journey to Kingston last Saturday, only longer and hence more fun, will leave Windsor Station Friday afternoon at 4:25 and will arrive in Toronto that night at 10:45 pm.

To return to Montreal one may take the 4:30 pm train on Saturday which will arrive here at 10:45 pm. In addition, trains will also be leaving Saturday night at 11:05 pm, Sunday morning at 10:30 am, and Sunday evening at 11:05 pm. These trains will arrive at 7:40 am Sunday, 6:15 pm

Sunday, and 8:40 am Monday respectively.

In addition, the Students' Executive Council has arranged special student rates at two prominent Toronto hotels, the Royal York and the King Edward.

First Time

This is the first time in McGill history that Toronto football habitations have offered reduced rates, so everyone should be sure to take advantage of them. However, in order to profit by this reduction, each and every student must produce their McGill Student Identification card.

The special rates offered by the Royal York are as follows: singles $6.00 and doubles $9.00. The hotel will supply additional cots to sleep up to six persons per room at the nominal rate of $3.00 per student. Thus six students in a room here would pay only $3.50 each.

King Edward

The King Edward, on the other hand, is charging in accordance with the number of occupants: three to a room pay $4.00 each, four pay $3.50 each, and five pay $3.00 each.

These rates are a big come-down from the $8 — $12 normally charged, so be sure to come. And remember, above all, bring your red and white sweater and your Identification Card.

Daniels Urges Strike And Civil Disobedience

by PETER PYPER

"Two great world blocs are presently using violence to secure their ends," said Montreal playwright Dan Daniels yesterday. The only way to fight these powers is for all people to join in a "general strike" against these aggressive governments. According to Daniels the only way for people interested in improving their lot is to use non-violent civil disobedience.

Daniels was speaking to a McGill CUCND meeting. He is Chairman of the Montreal Committee of 100, modelled after the Bertrand Russell organization in England.

The speaker cited the trade union movement, in particular the organization of the C.I.O. under John L. Lewis. He said that the employers were at a loss as to what to do when the workers merely sat down at their benches and refused to work. No violence was involved — but these acts led to the formation of the C.I.O.

Much To Lose

In relating this to actions against government, Daniels stated that people had much to lose by resorting to violence. The State can always muster "a great deal more violence," he said, mentioning that if you pursue a fight against war by utilizing violence, "you are accepting violence."

He cited the recent near civil war in Algeria after that country was given independence. The people themselves intervened and prevented the war — all non-violently.

Invasion

Visualizing a hypothetical invasion of Canada by an aggressor, Daniels said that the people should rely solely on non-violent means to obstruct this aggressor. However, he said the peace forces "cannot win until a vast number of people support them." "Extended support will make the peace movement the main liberating and revolutionary force today," Daniels said.

Speaking of the Cuban blockade as a "step close to war", he said the general presence of the crisis will help the fight against war. The people have been "outraged" by the situation and will make the voice of peace heard.

He continued by saying that foreign bases in Canada are as "aggressive and provocative as bases in Cuba." It was his belief that Canada should demand the withdrawal of American bases in Canada, such as the one at Churchill as well as the Bomarc missile sites.

Water Runs Thicker . . . ?

It seems that water runs thicker than blood on the McGill campus. Only 424 students could brave the heavy rains yesterday to come down to the Union to give blood. Despite all the amenities provided by the Blood Donor Clinic in terms of competition, prizes, food - amenities which should not even be needed - the first day turnout was one of the lowest on record in recent years.

It is a sad commentary on our responsibility as citizens of a society - as human beings - if the opportunity to save a human life has to be contingent upon the weather, for the fate of people needing this blood rests only on the fact that this blood is received, and not on a weather vane. But it is truly unfortunate if, as we suspect, the question goes far deeper than just a question of a rainy day; for it is indicative of a trend - a pattern of inertia, indifference, abstention - an attitude of utter irresponsibility.

Yet just a week ago the attitude of students during the Cuban crisis was one of concern and not indifference; the feeling one of involvement and not abstention; the response one of activity and not inertia. We wonder now whether this "responsible" attitude was not a self-centered expression; we wonder whether this was a true concern for one's fellow man.

The blood drive is not just another "extra-curricular activity", of the nature of the Debating Union, Annual or Daily; involvement or non-involvement is not just a question of one more or one less member. It is a question of one more or one less human life. It is not an exercise in statistics, it is an exercise in humanity; and it demands that we live up to our calling.

It is true that there are some students who are prevented from giving for medical reasons; but this is the smallest percentage of students; and they too can exercise a responsibility by registering at the clinic - their intention is at least declared; for it is difficult to believe that the highest rate of sickness for McGill students occurs at blood drive time and disappears quickly after.

Blood drive has another five days to run, with the clinic remaining open until 9 pm both today and Tuesday. There is no reason why a student cannot find time to give blood; there is every reason that he should. There are many people depending on us; we cannot and must not let them down.

The Issue Of Democracy In Africa

The article on "Democracy in Africa" by Joe Sinyor in the McGill Daily of October 12, 1962 makes very interesting reading. Indeed it is stimulating, much more so because of the lack of insight into the African situation displayed.

The writer, even if an African, must have been viewing the situation from the bastion of an outsider or unlooker thus giving the impression of an unbiased examiner of events. However the article, upon closer examination, shows a different thing - the vituperations of a frustrated ally of the old ruling class. Mr. Sinyor needs to note the following facts.

As to the prospects, indeed the practice, of democracy in Africa, the writer has been misled by the ideal of democracy to which all nations still aspire. With the ideal as a rule, he tries to measure the achievement of the newly independent African countries. One cannot quarrel with the measure but one may question the conclusions that are untempered by the observation of democracy in practice. Any one who stops to examine empirical democracy will know that neither the Africans of old nor the present-day "democratic-minded states" have instituted democracy other than in the upper echelon. I will request Mr. Sinyor to look at the western world today - United States, Canada, France, Belgium, Italy and the north-western countries of Europe; let my friend look at these and many more in their practice of democracy. An account of such a comparative study may be of interest to us all.

Struggle

It is true that many of the new African nations are tiny, but so are many nations in Europe. The existing territorial boundaries, as in many parts of the world, are the handiwork of foreign powers, the results of historical accidents. Africa today is struggling against the attempts at further balkanization of the countries. The smallness of a nation has nothing to do with its aspiration, nor has size a direct correlation with the practice of democracy. Mr. Sinyor's assertion that many of these new African countries "lie now under the yoke of a dictator, the people enslaved and cheated, deceived almost to a point of force" is very misleading. Does Mr. Sinyor regard a measure of authoritarianism a form of dictatorship which perforce leads to "enslavement"? We may note, however, that "strong hands" do not imply enslavement.

What should be known is that before political independence there were three main forms of enslavement in most of the African countries. There was still the enslavement by foreign powers (this is still so in some countries), it is the escape from this which crystallizes in political independence. There is the enslavement by the old rulers - the despotic chiefs and their aides who allied with foreign political and religious powers to keep the people ignorant and poor. Finally there is the enslavement by poverty itself. True democracy can only materialize with freedom from these types of enslavement. The wind of change has only removed a facet of the first enslavement - the political aspect, but the economic and cultural aspects are still very strong. Thus the legacy left to the leaders of the new African nations is not enviable.

Ed. Note: This is the first of a two-part series on democracy in Africa.

Great Task

Those who find themselves in power have to contend with the last two types of enslavement and the relics of the first. The task of freeing the people from these forms of enslavement is enormous and by its very nature calls for authoritarian measures. The old order of rulers, having vested interests, are keen on perpetuating the existing compromised form of government and possibly desirous of regaining their "past glories". No one will of course advocate this retrogression. What we are therefore witnessing is a struggle for power between the elites on the one hand and the chiefs and their reactionary allies on the other. The people at large have not benefitted. The gains of the people came only through freedom from the enslavement by poverty. The old order of rulers needs broad powers not only to consolidate independence but also to achieve economic and social reconstruction which is the only insurance against poverty, fear and insecurity. Will anyone call the powers needed for the unusual task dictatorial and wantonly oppressive? And will allowance not be made for the human frailty which tends to lead to the abuse of power?

Senior Debating Trials To Take Place Tonight

The Debating Union Senior Trials will be held tonight between 7 and 11:30 pm.

Since between 20 and 40 entrants are expected, the Union has arranged for appointments to be made. All debaters are asked to arrange their times from noon to 2 pm at the Debating Union Office in the basement of the Students' Union.

Family Study To Be Offered By Psychiatrist

Dr. Nathan Epstein, Psychiatrist-in-Chief of the Jewish General Hospital and Associate Professor of Psychiatry at McGill, will discuss "Psychiatric Aspects of the Family" tomorrow at 1 pm in Moyses Hall.

Speaking to the Psychology Club he will delve into the emotional development of humans. He has carried out a seven-year study of this problem in conjunction with Professor W. Westley, Chairman of the McGill Department of Sociology and Anthropology.

Interest In Fields

The student who has an interest in any of the fields of psychiatry, psychology, social psychology, sociology will find this lecture very interesting and informative.

As well as holding the aforementioned positions, Dr. Epstein is a training Psychoanalyst with the Canadian Institute of Psychoanalysts and has done some outstanding work in Family Psychiatry at the Jewish General Hospital.

Folk Music Society

Attention guitarists, banjoists, singers, autoharpsists and what have you! Here is your chance to be discovered! The McGill Folk-Music Society is seeking student talent for its annual series of folk-music concerts. Auditions will be held in the Workshop of the Old Union on Friday, November 2 from 7-11 pm. Everyone is welcome.

The topic for debate will be "Resolved that the non-communist nations of the world should form an economic community." The participants will listen to a five-minute affirmative speech on this topic and will then be given two minutes in which to prepare their refutation. They will be allotted five minutes for rebuttal.

Judge Results

Judging the results will be a panel under the chairmanship of a University professor.

The debaters who are successful in these trials will get the opportunity to represent McGill at tournaments in New York, Rochester, Long Island, Toronto, Bishop's, Harvard, Washington, Pittsburgh, and Burlington. The results will be announced in the Daily probably on Tuesday.

Raphael Demos Will Lecture On The Greek Mind

Raphael Demos, who has been described as "one of the greatest teachers of philosophy in the world today," will discuss "The Vitality of the Greek Mind in Modern Times" at a public lecture in Moyses Hall tonight at 8 pm. Tickets are not required for the talk.

James Miller, chairman of the department of Philosophy at McGill, who described Dr. Demos as a "great teacher" said that he has been known for many years at Harvard University as one of its most interesting and colorful lecturers.

Introduction

Dr. Miller will introduce Demos, an emeritus professor of philosophy at Harvard, and now a visiting professor at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee, following his retirement last June.

Chapel Dedication Opens New Centre

The opening of the new Canterbury House will be marked by the dedication of the chapel at a service tonight. The service will take place at 6 pm.

The chapel will be dedicated by the Anglican Bishop-elect of Montreal, Kenneth Maguire. Following the Communion and dedication will be a dinner and party.

All Saints

The chapel is to be called All Saints' Chapel. Located on the first floor of Canterbury House, it is designed in a simple, contemporary motif planned by the architectural firm of Durnford and Bolton.

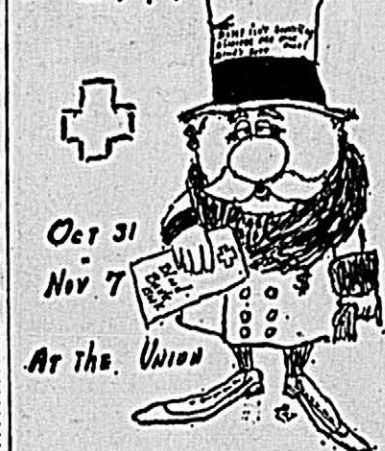

The chapel, together with a common room, offices and kitchen make up the students' centre at Canterbury House. This is open all day from 10 am until midnight for student activities and discussions, and coffee is always available.

The new house makes possible a greater number of activities and programs for the coming term, and the added space will allow more people to fit comfortably into the various discussion groups.

Anyone wishing to come to the All Saints' Day Communion and Dedication Service should come to Canterbury House at 6 pm.

Harrier In London On This Saturday

Saturday afternoon, McGill will make an attempt at regaining the Intercollegiate Harrier Championship. The Redmen, who were the champions in 1960, yielded the title to Toronto last year. This weekend's meet will be hosted by the University of Western Ontario and will be held in London.

Over the past three years McGill's record in this competition has been most enviable. The acquisition of Pete Adams began a new era in harrier and long distance track events.

Adams, who came to McGill to study for a Ph.D. in geography, had previously run with England's Sheffield University. In 1960, he placed second in individual Intercollegiate Harrier competition and McGill came in as the runner-up team. In 1961 both Adams and the McGill team won all the marbles. Last year Adams placed second again and the team followed suit. The graduate now coaches the cross-country men.

Champion Kidd

Adams' capitulation last year was forced by no less a champion than Toronto's Bruce Kidd. Kidd, this continent's premier 3 and 5-mile runner, will once again be leading his U of T teammates in quest of the Harrier crown. It is expected that this will be his last race before next month's British Empire games. He is definitely the man to beat.

Nine teams will each field five men in London. Carrying the Red and White colours will be Bob Shirley, McGill's best this season, team captain Bob Walkiw, Gord McKay, Dave Prebble and Jeff Mance. Shirley placed a strong second to Kidd in the mile and three-mile events at the track Championships held in Hamilton on Oct. 17.

In addition to McGill and Toronto, McMaster, Western, Queen's, Assumption, Federated Colleges, U de M and the Ottawa-St. Lawrence Champions will also compete. McMaster is expected to field the strongest team in this group.

Unused Volunteers Will Still Receive Exercise Program

Support to our appeal for volunteers for a physical exercise research program being sponsored by the Faculty of Medicine and run by the School of Physical and Occupational Therapy has been of magnum proportions.

Over 300 students responded and it has not been possible to accommodate them. Just over one hundred individuals were taken into the course on a first come-first serve basis. The Athletics Department is cooperating with Miss Ward, the director of the program in an attempt to extend the advantages of the exercise program to those who showed interest.

The research program has its full complement of guinea pigs but a plan of exercises is being organized for the people who have already given in their names. All others need not apply.

This program of ten exercises is isometric in nature and calculated to increase overall muscle tone. Miss Ward is at present working out the set of exercises and someone in the Athletic Department will direct this scheme. Tuesdays and Thursdays are the days designated for this exercise program.

All those who left their names for the research program will be contacted starting on Friday. The research program cannot accept any more people but it is hoped this new one can absorb the overflow.

Skypeck Running ???

Here he is, the man that runs the show — Tom Skypeck. Skypeck is shown here breaking out of the passing pocket and heading downfield in last Saturday's game at Kingston. Watching number 60's progress are Fraser Allan (on the ground) and Brian Marshall (30). About 10 yards after this shot was taken, Skypeck used that menacing left forearm to demolish one of Queen's would-be tacklers.
